

JOE MAZURKIEWICZ, JR. Ph.D
Southwest Florida Community Foundation

Joe Mazurkiewicz is the President of BJM Consulting, Inc., a firm that specializes in local government activities. Elected as Mayor of Cape Coral, Florida, in 1983 and serving for ten years, he led the City in its attempt to change from a bedroom community to an urban center. Presently, Joe works on a variety of local issues ranging from land use cases to incorporation studies, and his company has completed incorporation studies for numerous areas in Southwest Florida.

Joe attended the University of Florida where he studied engineering and earned his Bachelor's Degree in Administration from Barry University, a Masters of Science in Administration from Central Michigan University and a Ph.D. in Business Administration with a Concentration in Public Administration Cum Laude from Stamford Hill University. Presently, he is Vice President of Academic Affairs, and Director of the Public Administration Program at IMPAC University.

The Southwest Florida Community Foundation Board of Trustees asked Mr. Mazurkiewicz to join them in 2003, and the Asset Development Committee as well as the Strategic Planning Committee have benefited from his professional knowledge and experience.

Currently, Joe also serves as Trustee Member of the Ruth Cooper Center for Behavioral Health Care Board, Executive Director of the Council for Progress Foundation, Board Member of Gulf Coast Village, Board member for the Cape Coral Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Lee Memorial Community Visioning Committee and is a Rotarian through the Cape Coral Goldcoast Club. In the past, he has been Chairman for the Leadership Cape Coral Class of 200 and was a member of Lee County's Local Planning Agency.

Joe and his wife, Heather, have three daughters and two grandsons and reside in Cape Coral, Florida.
